

Caledonia Kermodes finish eighth place in tournament

Herald Staff Writer

The Caledonia Kermodes finished the four day 'AA' boys high school basketball tournament in eighth place after losing their final game to Hillside 75-56.

The Kermodes had a 2-2 record in the tournament. They dropped their first game to Centennial 81-74. The Kermodes played with Centennial for most of the game, losing their hold on play in one quarter only. Stacey Cook was high scorer with 18 points for Caledonia. First team allstar Greg Nyte paced the Centaurs with 18 also.

Caledonia became known as the comeback team after they came from behind in their next two matches to grab a pair of victories.

In Thursday's contest against Duchess Park of Prince George, Caledonia blew a six point halftime lead to trail 49-43 at the end of three quarters. Prince George led by as much as eight points in the final quarter but Caledonia pulled out the win with a strong final five minutes. Wade Watson and Mike Hogg shared top scoring spot with 18 each. Watson was named player of the game.

Game three for the Kermodes was the most exciting yet. Caledonia was outplayed by the Okanagan Mission team for the first three quarters of the game. Okanagan led 57-42 at the half and increased their lead to 22 points in the third quarter. Everyone in the Agradome had written the team off in the game but then the comeback kids went into action. Coming back from a 22 point deficit, Caledonia tied it in the last minute of the game. Stacey Cook tossed up a three quarter court desperation shot at the buzzer that rolled around on the rim then popped out sending the game into overtime.

The comeback held in the overtime period and Caledonia won 100-94. Mike Hogg was outstanding with 32 points in the game. The overtime game set two new provincial tournament records for the highest combined score in a game and for the highest losing score. The win also moved Terrace into the consolation game for fifth and eighth place against Hillside.

Saturday's game saw Caledonia allow Hillside an early 8-0 lead and this time there was no coming back. Hillside led 41-30 at the half and 62-33 at three quarter time. Caledonia made a brief spurt drive in the third quarter but Hillside rallied and ended the game with a decisive 75-56 final score. Mike Hogg was high scorer with 17 points.

In the championship game of the tournament it was an all Richmond match up setting Richmond Colts against Steveston Packers of Richmond. The Packers got a convincing 81-57 victory. Super guard Gareth Davies set a new scoring record in the final game with 45 points. The previous record was 39 scored by Centennial's Lars Hansen in 1972.

Davies was named to the first allstar team along with Rod Ast of Richmond, Dave Lodgins of Windsor, Paul Verret of Killarney and Aaron Point of King George. Point was also named MVP of the tournament.

Second team allstars were Brian Brown and Vic Williams of Steveston, David Olafson of Richmond, Greg Nyte of Centennial, and Geoff McKay of Penticton.

Final team standings in the tournament were as follows: 1) Steveston Packers, 2) Richmond Colts, 3) Killarney Cougars, 4) Windsor Dukes, 5) Hillside Highwaymen, 6) Centennial Centaurs, 7) King George Dragons, and 8) Caledonia Kermodes. Teams that did not place were Duchess Park, Parkland, Okanagan Mission, MEI, Nanaimo, Abbotsford, Mount Baker, Penticton.

Teachers battle restraint program

VANCOUVER (CP) — Embittered by layoffs and education cutbacks, British Columbia's teachers are concentrating on how they can fight the provincial government's restraint program at their three-day convention.

Overshadowing the usual resolutions at the B.C. Teachers' Federation conventions proposing pension plan changes and housekeeping measures, are calls for political protests, a public commission into education, and help for parents' groups resisting reductions in education services. The 28,000-member federation will also have to decide its own future and whether it should be more like a union. While the federation has the right to bargain for teachers' salaries, the B.C. government maintains the School Act prohibits teachers from striking or negotiating working conditions.

Outgoing president Larry Kuehn said teachers have little choice but to become more militant because they face a dismal future in B.C.

"When schools open in September 1984 there will be well over 2,500 fewer teachers in B.C.'s schools than when schools closed in June 1982," Kuehn told about 700 delegates at the convention's opening session Sunday evening at the Hotel Vancouver.

Even those who still have jobs, he said, will face larger classes, reduced services, unwanted transfers to new communities and subject assignments they never sought. NOT ISOLATED Kuehn also said teachers cannot consider their problems in isolation — high unemployment, the attack on union rights and the slashing of social services are all part of the provincial government's retributive attitude toward workers in British Columbia.

Kuehn called for closer ties with Operation Solidarity, the amalgam of public and private sector unions that organized the November strike that peaked with a three-day walkout by most of B.C.'s teachers last November.

Another sign pointing to increased militancy is an address today by Renata Shearer, co-chairman of the Solidarity Coalition. She is expected to urge teachers to continue to back the organization, which includes tenants, human rights activists, clergy members and welfare recipients.

Not all agree with Kuehn and Shearer. A faction led by Allan Garneau, a Vancouver elementary school principal seeking a term as a member-at-large, wants the federation to concentrate on its professional responsibilities rather than its role as a union.

Garneau described the November strike "as an exercise in futility" that left the federation in a chaotic state and the public bewildered.

Pat Clarke, federation first vice-president and candidate for the presidency, said, "Garneau's faction represents a desire to find at all costs a way of compromising to make life easier for teachers and they call that more professional."

Running against Clarke is Doug Smart, a Prince George elementary school teacher, who emphasizes "open, honest discussions" with school trustees and the provincial government and greater public awareness of the issues.

Most of the resolutions and recommendations to be debated show the federation's membership is in a more war-like mood. They include:

— Establishing of a defence fund to pay teachers on strike and to finance protest campaigns;

— Levying fines of 150 per cent of a day's pay against teachers who cross picket lines;

— Launching a legal challenge of the B.C. School Act, which prohibits teachers from bargaining for working conditions or striking;

— Investigating joining or affiliating with the Canadian Labor Congress; and,

— Asking the government to set up a commission, the first since 1960, for public discussion of curriculum, facilities and the future of the school system;

Noticeably absent is the traditional address by the education minister.

Kuehn said Education Minister Jack Heinrich was not invited because "it would not be productive" because the minister would say things that would "outrage the membership."

Talks adjourned

VANCOUVER (CP) — Negotiators for the British Columbia pulp industry and its two locked-out unions conferred for just over an hour Sunday, then with no indication of progress adjourned their contract talks until today.

Art Gruntman, Canadian Paperworkers Union vice-president, said he estimated the dispute has cost his 9,000 union members about $4,000 each since the lockout was imposed Feb. 2 and the companies still refuse to bargain. Industry negotiators accused the unions of playing games.

Both sides said the central issue remains length of contract, with the union saying they will adopt a three-year contract, which the companies want, but it must include a cost-of-living adjustment. The companies will not accept this adjustment.

The industry wants the unions to accept a contract similar to one ratified by the 35,000-member International Woodworkers of America earlier this year. The woodworkers accepted a three-year contract with a wage freeze in the first year, which ends June 30 this year and increases of four per cent and 4 1/2 per cent in the succeeding two years.

Base rate now is $13.96 an hour for both woodworkers and pulp workers.

The Pulp and Paper Industrial Relations Bureau, which represents 14 companies operating 20 pulp and paper mills in British Columbia, locked out about 13,000 members of the paperworkers union and the Pulp, Paper and Woodworkers of Canada, saying the unions were dragging their feet in negotiations.

About 10,000 woodworkers have been off the job since pulp workers began secondary picketing at forest products companies who operate both pulp and lumber operations, producing tension between the leaders of the two pulp unions and the woodworkers union.

Turner support awesome

VANCOUVER (CP) — Support in British Columbia for Liberal leadership hopeful John Turner in British Columbia is "awesome", according to organizers for the other candidates.

Turner, a 54-year-old Toronto lawyer, announced Friday he wants to succeed Pierre Trudeau as Liberal Party leader. He was the fourth candidate to enter the race. Economic Development Minister Donald Johnston, Justice Minister Mark MacGuigan and Employment Minister John Roberts had declared earlier.

Still debating whether to contest the leadership are: Energy Minister Jean Chretien, Northern Development Minister John Munro, party president Iona Campagnolo, Transport Minister Lloyd Axworthy, Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan and former Trudeau aide Jim Coult.

Turner's popularity in the West comes partially from his school days at the University of British Columbia from 1946 to 1949.

It also dates back to the 1968 leadership race, when a substantial number of B.C. delegates voted for Turner and stuck with him until the last ballot. Of the loyalists in the so-called 195 Club, a good proportion were from British Columbia.

He has maintained that loyal following even though he left politics suddenly and without explanation in 1975.

SUPPORT 'PHENOMENAL'

Before Turner had even declared his intention to run, John Swift, a Vancouver lawyer and a key Turner adviser, described Turner's B.C. support as "phenomenal" and "beyond our expectations."

The only real concern he expressed about his candidate was the fact the Turner has been out of speech-making and politicking for a long time. He said Turner needs to get on the campaign trail quickly to polish his skills.

Len Marchand, former Liberal MP from Kamloops and a Chretien supporter, laughed nervously about Turner's support from the 312 potential delegates from B.C. Marchand then replied, "awesome".

Gerry Kristianson, a key Johnston organizer, knows the chief rival is Turner. But what people like Kristianson, the Liberal candidate in Esquimalt-Saanich, hope is that Turner's supporters left the party when he did in 1975.

Kristianson figures that the Johnston supporters, who have been working in the party, are more likely to get delegate status.

"After all," he said, "this isn't a struggle for hearts and minds, but for delegates."

REJECTS ARGUMENT

Swift doesn't buy that argument. He points to people like Shawn Sullivan, co-chairman of the party's national election campaign, who was one of the members of the 195 Club. He also claims a handful of B.C. constituency presidents as Turner supporters.

Support for MacGuigan and Roberts is virtually non-existent. MacGuigan hasn't found a provincial organizer yet and Roberts' organization is just being put together. In an unscientific sampling of potential B.C. delegates, there was also no indication of support for Coult.

David McLean, a Vancouver lawyer and a Chretien supporter, said Turner's support isn't just verbal. The Chretien bagman said he expects Turner can raise as much as $500,000 in B.C. alone.

Most candidates are expected to spend nearly $2 million on their campaigns. Swift, on the other hand, said Chretien's reluctance to commit himself to the race is because his support has been vague promises that haven't translated into delegate votes or money.

McLean said what is keeping Chretien from announcing is the uncertainty about the support he can draw from Quebec.

However, McLean said he is urging Chretien to run as a statesman, a Canadian first and a French-Canadian second.

He said Chretien has a gut-level emotional appeal for delegates and voters, while he concedes that Turner has "a lot of credibility and sex appeal."

Despite the bravado of the organizers, most B.C. Liberals say they are going to wait before committing themselves.

However, there is no evidence of formal support for the proposition made by former transport minister Otto Lang that Westerners stay uncommitted until the June convention to pressure leadership candidates into devising policies for Western Canada.

McGlinchey to be arraigned

BELFAST (AP) — Dominic McGlinchey, Ireland's most wanted man, is expected to be arraigned this week on a charge of murdering a 63-year-old postmistress in 1977, authorities said today.

McGlinchey, 30, who has claimed to have killed 30 people since 1972, was captured Saturday in a gun battle with police in the Irish republic.

He made history by becoming the first militant nationalist to be extradited by Dublin authorities to the British-ruled Northern Ireland since the island was partitioned in 1921.

A spokesman at Belfast police headquarters said McGlinchey was still being questioned by police detectives late Sunday, 24 hours after Irish police handed him over to Northern Ireland authorities at the border near Dundalk.

McGlinchey, chief of staff of the outlawed Irish National Liberation Army, was dubbed Mad Dog by his comrades for the brutality of the killings he allegedly carried out.

He is expected to be arraigned in Magistrate's Court in Belfast in connection with the 1977 murder of Hester McMullen, 63, who was killed during a machine-gun attack by Irish nationalist militants at her home in Kilmbridge, County Antrim, in a bid to kill her son, a police reservist.

ADMITS PARTICIPATION

McGlinchey admitted participation in the slaying when he appeared in court in the Irish republic in 1982 but claimed the crime was politically motivated.

Under Britain's emergency powers regulations, suspected gunmen can be held by police for up to seven days before being charged.

Police sources, who asked not to be identified, said McGlinchey was being questioned about "between 15 and 20 murders" in Northern Ireland. Police said he also faced questioning about 200 other shootings and bombings.

McGlinchey was asked about a machine-gun attack on a Protestant gospel hall last Nov. 20 in the border town of Derry, in which three children were killed, the sources said.

Police also link McGlinchey to the December 1982 pub bombing in Ballykelly, near Londonderry, in which 17 people, including 11 off-duty British soldiers, were killed in one of the worst bombings in the 14 1/2 years of sectarian bloodshed.

Investment wanted

VANCOUVER (CP) — Indonesia wants to offset its huge trade imbalance with this country by attracting Canadian investment, says Hasjim Djalal, Indonesian ambassador to Canada.

Djalal acknowledged there is already Canadian investment in the world's largest archipelago, but he said in an interview that Indonesia would like to see more.

Trade between the two countries last year totalled $240 million with the balance heavily in Canada's favor. Canada exported $210-million worth of goods to Indonesia, while Indonesia sent only $39-million worth of goods here.

The ambassador said Indonesia offers an extremely favorable investment climate to foreign companies and it allows them 100-per-cent ownership.

"We have established an extremely lenient investment regime and amongst other things we offer tax holidays and no restrictions on foreign currency," he said.

Current Canadian investment in Indonesia amounts to about $1 billion, mainly in the nickel and fishing industries.

Canada's image in Indonesia is good, Djalal said. "There are no political problems between us and that should make it easier for us to make our relationship more intense."

Indonesia is rich in natural resources, especially oil, and could prove to be a major competitor to Canada in the future. It has already beaten this nation with its liquefied natural gas (LNG) exports to Japan and South Korea.

Two LNG plants are already operating and another two will come on stream shortly, said Djalal.

Indonesia already has long-term contracts in place and is the major LNG exporter in the world.

Dome Petroleum plans to build an LNG plant at Port Simpson, B.C., north of Prince Rupert. Although the company has signed contracts with Japanese buyers, the project has been delayed because of gas-pricing problems with the Alberta government.

Socreds slammed

NELSON, B.C. (CP) — Frustration in the West Kootenay area of British Columbia found a sympathetic reception Sunday as New Democratic Party leadership hopefuls slammed the provincial government for its planned May 1 closure of the area's David Thompson University Centre.

The leadership candidates are: Bill King, former MLA for Revelstoke; Dave Stupich, MLA for Nanaimo; former party worker, Margaret Birrell; lawyer David Vickers; Alberni MLA Bob Skelly and Graham Lea, MLA for Prince Rupert.

The meeting was held at the doomed campus and questions from the audience of 250 reflected a preoccupation with the centre's closure in particular and jobs in general. The latest statistics for Nelson put the unemployment rate at over 30 per cent.

King, favored by many local party supporters, attacked the Social Credit government for "spending huge amounts of money on a football stadium (B.C. Place) — a playpen for foreign athletes — while the centre is deemed unworthy."

"Nearly $1.5 billion of taxpayers' money has been poured into northeast coal, a dubious venture from a business point of view — while the province's education system is destroyed," said King. "Tuition fees are being raised at B.C.'s universities so that Interior children are deprived of access."

Stupich said Nelson has not suffered alone. He said education cuts have also affected ridings like Surrey, which are represented by Social Credit MLAs.

However, he said spending cutbacks in the province's elementary, secondary and post-secondary institutions, are a message from the provincial government to those that cannot afford private schools that they "don't deserve the best education."

"That's for the elite, as represented by (Universities Minister) Dr. Pat McGeer," said Stupich. "Education is reserved for those who have the where-withall to pay for it, or the superior minds to take advantage of it. The rest of us can go without."

MUST DECENTRALIZE

Birrell, the only woman in the race, won the loudest applause with her message that the NDP must decentralize and win back its grassroots support, while Lea's push for economic planning and Skelly's call for more reforestation also drew applause.

At a candidates meeting Saturday in Cranbrook, Vickers said the NDP must represent both union and non-union workers in the province.

Vickers told about 150 people at the meeting in the southeastern B.C. community, that the party has an obligation to improve the lot of both types of workers.

Birrell said the media has confused the public over the issue of union versus non-union labor on construction projects. She said the party should not address which is better, but simply throw the question back to the media.

The issue has arisen at a Vancouver condominium development where building trades unions are fighting a non-union construction company.

Skelly said the NDP failed in the last election to adequately explain the party's economic policies and spent too much time at the legislature and not enough in the constituencies.

National policy needed on aquaculture

VANCOUVER (CP) — Canada needs to develop a national policy on aquaculture to help promote an industry that could mean hundreds of millions of dollars to the economy, says a paper prepared by the Industry Task Force on Aquaculture.

The report, prepared for the annual meeting of the World Mariculture Society being held in Vancouver and sponsored by the Science Council of Canada, says a national policy would define the responsibilities of the various levels of government in the administration and regulation of the industry.

Aquaculture is the farming of aquatic plants and animals. It involves manipulating organisms' life cycles to increase its production for food and other uses like pharmaceuticals. Mariculture is a form of aquaculture that deals exclusively with farming the sea.

The paper, released Sunday, says the provinces should immediately establish advisory committees on aquaculture to co-ordinate the industry and both levels of government.

"The Department of Fisheries and Oceans development program should increase its budget by $1 million in the first year, $1.5 million in the second year, and $3 million in the third year for research, development and demonstration projects according to priorities established by the provincial committees," it says.

CANADA LAGGING

The report, written by members representing private sector interests in aquaculture, was sponsored by the council after it found Canada lagging behind other countries in developing aquaculture.

While the wild fisheries are facing difficult times with over-fishing, pollution and poor returns to fishermen, world demand for good quality fish and other aquatic products is increasing, the paper says.

"The world output from aquaculture has increased rapidly in recent years. By 1984 it will amount to about 10 million tonnes — representing more than 10 per cent of the total world harvest of fishery products."

The report says European countries have recognized aquaculture as a productive industry with great potential and they have policies and programs to support the industry's growth.

Some aquaculture initiatives in Canada include the small scale farming of abalone, mussels and Pacific salmon and larger scale farming of oysters on the West Coast. On the East Coast, Atlantic salmon, mussels and oysters are being farmed.

"These operations represent only a very minor step towards realizing the existing potential," the paper says. It adds that every 20 tonnes of fish produced annually through farming, represented one person-year of employment.

MANY CONSTRAINTS

The paper cited several constraints on aquaculture development in Canada including:

— A traditional dependence on the coastal and inland fisheries of Canada, which get most of the government's attention in terms of resource management and allocation;

— The lack of a clear policy between the federal government and the provinces regarding jurisdictions over fisheries, inland waters, the seabed, licensing regulations and financial aid;

— A lack of production data and good fiscal information on aquaculture projects; and,

— A lack of government incentives, such as long-term, low-interest loans and operating grants.

The paper suggests seasonal cycles of the wild fisheries that result in seasonal unemployment could be moderated by marketing and processing aquaculture produce in the off-season.

The report also says substantial quantities of cultivated seafoods being imported into Canada, including fresh and processed oysters, processed mussels and fresh and processed trout, could be replaced by domestic aquaculture produce.

Exploration below levels

VANCOUVER (CP) — Oil and natural gas exploration activity in British Columbia is far below the heady heights of 1980 but is rebounding from the disastrous levels of 1982 and 1983.

One particularly bright spot is Gulf Canada Resources Ltd.'s drilling of a promising well in the Desan area near the Helmet gas field, 120 kilometres northeast of Fort Nelson.

Apart from the Gulf well, which has sparked a rush by other oil companies to the area, the exploration industry has received boosts from a new gas marketing system, a gas export price cut and deregulation in the United States.

The provincial government said Husky Oil has paid $4.3 million for drilling licences around the Desan area. Husky is leading a consortium to explore for oil northwest of the Gulf well at Theilaandoa. The consortium, which includes Roxy Oil, Pembina and Western Decalita Petroleum, paid a hefty $4,000 per hectare.

Wulf Quinn, commissioner of petroleum titles, said the government last week sold 20 drilling leases out of a possible 30 for a total of $11 million. A year ago a similar lease sale brought only $2.6 million; the 1982 sale, only $1.6 million.

WELL FLOWED

The Gulf well, drilled in February, 1983, flowed good-quality oil at the rate of 173 barrels a day from a depth of about 800 metres.

Gulf is licensed to drill 80 wells and expects to have completed its program by the end of March before the spring thaw makes the ground too soft to bear the weight of the equipment.

"It'll take all the summer to evaluate the drilling results in the Desan area," said Gulf spokesman Scott Ransom. "If it is deemed to be a commercially viable, well then we have to consider how to ship the oil out."

He said the oil could go either east to Alberta or west in B.C. through existing pipelines.

According to Gulf, seven of the 20 follow-up wells completed since the 1984 drilling season began in December have flowed oil, with seven dry holes. Three of the holes still being tested have produced oil and a fourth yielded gas.

Gulf is the operator on the project and holds a 70-per-cent working interest.

In 1983 only 77 oil and gas wells were drilled throughout the province and 109 in 1982. In 1980 and 1981 between 300 and 400 wells were drilled in the province.

Bob Durie, assistant deputy energy minister, said the downturn in drilling activity in the province reflected the soft natural gas market in the United States.

RIGS WORK

Although the Gulf oil find is likely to be significant, the bread and butter of B.C.'s exploration industry remains natural gas. Durie said there are currently 27 rigs in the province (including those working for Gulf). In 1979 and 1980, there were about 100 rigs working in the province.

The new provincial gas marketing system announced last fall, which will simplify the royalty system and allow gas producers to sell directly to customers, will stimulate drilling activity next season, Durie said.

In the first quarter of 1984, the province received $12.2 million in bonus payments compared with $26 million for all of 1983 and $18.7 million in 1982. Bonus payments are made by oil and gas exploration companies to maintain their drilling rights.

"The oil and gas industry pumps more direct revenues into the provincial coffers than mining and forestry," said Quinn. "From 1978 to 1983, direct revenues from oil and gas totalled $2 billion to the provincial government."

Despite the surge in oil drilling sparked by the Desan wells, natural gas exploration remains relatively depressed. Quinn said the amount of shut-in gas in British Columbia combined with the soft U.S. gas markets will keep exploration activity down for some time.

Crew waiting

HALIFAX (CP) — When the freighter Devon III ran aground Nov. 17 on a beach 50 nautical miles south of Halifax, its captain and crew had no idea what to expect.

Four months later, Capt. Constant Homer and six of his crew are still here waiting. They have not been paid since September, the vessel's Florida-based owners cannot be found and Canadian authorities have seized the captain's parrot.

The 600-tonne ship was refloated Dec. 4 and towed to a local shipyard. With no one to pay the bills for salvage work and repairs, it was placed under arrest Jan. 5.

Meanwhile, the captain and crew have been getting by on the kindness of strangers. Churches, students at the Nova Scotia Nautical Institute and the Canadian Union of Postal Workers have pitched in to help.

One crewman is in Montreal, 1,000 kilometres away, while the captain, three Guyanians, two Filipinos and one Grenadian are packed like sardines in a small Halifax apartment.

They spend their time watching television — "Our main occupation," says Homer — and discussing their plight. The bad conditions have taken their toll on relations among them and the captain shows the strain.

"I would prefer to be a captain at sea than in this house," Homer said.

PROBLEMS MOUNT

Some crew members have not been home for more than two years. The boat's wife is filing for divorce. Another crewman says his wife, caring for six children and with no paycheck coming in, tried to commit suicide.

Labor lawyer Ray Larkin has been contracted by the International Transport Workers Federation to represent the men in their bid to retrieve $60,000 they say the ship's owner, Devon Shipping Ltd. of Florida, owes them in wages.

The problem is, Devon Shipping vanished after it was paid more than $500,000 insurance on the vessel. Homer says two of the company's other ships are under arrest in Puerto Rico.

The Devon III was sailing to Prince Edward Island to pick up a load of potatoes when it ran aground while anchored in a cove during a storm. Homer said the trip would have earned $30,000 for the company.

"If you had a choice, which would you take — $30,000 or $500,000?"

The crew won a $60,000 default judgment on the value of the ship in Federal Court in Halifax last week. But the old Devon III, whose repairs were halted when the company disappeared, may not be worth it.

Even if it is, says the captain, the shipyard has first claim to the money. Homer, a Romanian by birth, now is a United States citizen. He has no family there and all his possessions, which he carried on board ship, now are in storage around Halifax.

Homer brought with him his German shepherd dog, Mona, and his African parrot, Max.

GETS PROTECTION

But the parrot has run into problems. Agriculture Canada considers Max a member of an endangered species and therefore is affording him special protection. After spending several weeks in quarantine, Max was seized and taken to a local animal shelter, where he will stay until Homer leaves.

But Homer says he won't leave — not until his crew is granted some kind of passage home.

"I am still a member of the crew and I want these guys to go home in a civilized way."

The men had figured that as long as they were with their ship, they would have a better chance of getting their money. But that hope is fading.

"It doesn't look good," says Larkin.

The Devon III was registered in Panama for income tax purposes. Getting in touch with the Florida owners has been next to impossible.

Larkin said former company president Pat Novac cannot be found, but phoned recently to say he was no longer with Devon Shipping. Nobody seems to know who has the insurance settlement, which Novac had promised would pay the crew's wages.

Militiamen exchange fire in Beirut

BEIRUT (AP) — Christian and Moslem militiamen exchanged rocket and mortar fire in and around Beirut today as their leaders struggled to break an apparent deadlock at reconciliation talks in Switzerland.

Beirut police said two people were killed and 13 wounded in overnight combat along the so-called Green Line dividing the capital into Christian and Moslem sectors.

The Israeli military command in Tel Aviv said two Israeli army cars were targets Sunday night of light arms fire and two rocket-propelled grenades in eastern Lebanon near the Syrian line.

The command said there were no injuries, but military sources reported from the scene that a soldier was slightly hurt.

The bomb-shattered commercial district at Beirut's closed port was the scene of the heaviest fighting, police said. Combatants swapped hit-and-run grenade assaults backed up by mortar barrages that spread to neighborhoods along the Green Line, police said.

Clashes drove hundreds of families into basements and bomb shelters in the Shiite Moslem southern suburbs.

Christian-controlled radio stations said the Christian suburbs of Zalka and Jdeideh, east of Beirut, also were being shelled and urged residents to stay indoors.

FIGHTING WAS LIGHTER

However, the fighting, on the sixth day of a ceasefire proclaimed by Lebanese leaders meeting in Lausanne, Switzerland, was lighter than over the weekend, when police said at least 15 civilians were killed and 45 wounded.

U.S. marine Maj. Robert McLean, spokesman for the U.S. Embassy, said it had been "uncharacteristically quiet" today around the embassy compound on western Beirut's Eln Mreisseh seafont boulevard.

There was no reported progress in efforts to find kidnapped American diplomat William Buckley, who was seized by three gunmen outside his western Beirut apartment Friday.

Buckley is first secretary of the embassy's political section, and McLean said the U.S. Embassy has no new information on his whereabouts.

In Lausanne, a Lebanese government spokesman said France has agreed in principle to redeploy its 1,250-man peacekeeping force in Beirut to "buffer zones" along the Green Line.

GUARD PORT

The independent Beirut daily An-Nahar said the troops also would guard the port and airport, closed since Feb. 6, and roads leading to them, but not without assurances from faction leaders that the truce would be observed.

The French Defense Ministry in Paris would neither confirm nor deny the report.

The French are the only members of the four-country multinational peacekeeping force to remain in Beirut. The Italians and British have withdrawn and the U.S. marines have redeployed to ships offshore.

The shooting attack on two Israeli armor cars in Kamed el-Louz was the second in three days against Israeli troops in eastern Lebanon. Last Friday, a Soviet-made Katyusha rocket was fired at an Israeli position.

The military sources said Israel regarded the attacks in eastern Lebanon seriously because of the area's proximity to the Syrian troops in Lebanon. Israel has claimed that Syria harbors guerrillas in Syrian-occupied territory.

In Lausanne, President Amin Gemayel and the eight leaders of rival Lebanese factions remained locked in disputes over power-sharing proposals.

The leaders are trying to agree on government reform which, among other things, would give Lebanon's Moslem majority a larger representation in the government.

El Salvador corruption not rampant

WASHINGTON (AP) — A top U.S. foreign aid official says theft of American economic assistance to El Salvador is not "rampant," although Salvadoran safeguards against corruption need improvement.

Jay Morris, deputy administrator of the U.S. Agency for International Development, conceded that Central American accounting procedures are inadequate to ensure proper use of U.S. assistance, but said that problem will be corrected by the time Congress acts on a major aid increase this year.

"I honestly do not believe that we have a serious corruption problem in El Salvador — certainly no worse than found in most of our recipient countries," Morris said in a recent interview with The Associated Press.

"I submit that a certain amount (of corruption) is endemic in all human society including our own," he said. "It's when it goes beyond levels of tolerance that you should become alarmed."

CONCERN GROWS

Congressional concern about alleged misuse of U.S. aid in El Salvador has grown since President Reagan's National Bipartisan Commission on Central America recommended $8.4 billion in U.S. economic aid to the region during the next five years. Reagan has requested $674 million in economic aid this year and next for El Salvador alone.

Some members of Congress have questioned whether El Salvador and the other major recipient countries such as Honduras and Costa Rica can handle the stepped-up aid or whether the money will be diverted into the personal bank accounts of government officials.

Morris said that while El Salvador's safeguards against diversion of U.S. funds need improvement, American auditors have found no evidence of widespread theft of U.S. money. "There isn't rampant diversion of money," Morris said.

He said a 100-page classified report prepared by Arthur Young and Co., a private consulting firm, "does not allege widespread corruption" in El Salvador's Central Bank. "What the Arthur Young reports said is that you're open to it unless things are done."

In January, Representative Michael Barnes (D-Md.) said the report "demonstrates rampant mismanagement and corruption in the use of foreign exchange assistance that the United States has provided to El Salvador."

The June 1983 report, a copy of which was obtained by The Associated Press, found weaknesses in the bank's handling of foreign exchange funds, but did not estimate how much was being improperly used.

Specifically, the report criticized political influence in the allocation of the scarce funds and claimed the bank inadequately checks import invoices to prevent businessmen from inflating their costs and pocketing some of the money.

Morris said that in response to the study, the bank's price-checking unit has been increased to five from three officials and should grow to 13 within the next few months. He also said Honduras and Costa Rica, which have even less sophisticated operations than El Salvador, are establishing similar price checking units.

U.S. causes confusion

TORONTO (CP) — Many people in the Philippines are confused by a freedom-loving country like the United States would extol democracy at home while supporting brutal and corrupt dictatorships around the world, says the younger brother of assassinated Philippine opposition leader Benigno Aquino.

Agapito Aquino told a news conference Sunday the positions are "a double standard" and "very confusing."

"America is the No. 1 exponent of democracy," he said. "They call America the champion of freedom and democracy. I got to their country and I find it is working and viable."

"But it surprises me why a country like America should support dictators all over the world, including the Philippines."

Since his brother's death last August at Manila International Airport, Aquino, a Jesuit educated philosophy major and an electrical engineer, has been thrust into the centre of Philippine politics.

He is on a tour of Canada and the United States to rally support for a non-violent topping of the regime of Philippine President Ferdinand Marcos.

Aquino, 44, said he did not come to Canada to "agitate the Filipino community," which has a Canadian population of about 130,000.

He said he came "to meet them and, through them, explain to other Canadians what the Filipino problem is."

Aquino said he took over his brother's mission to restore freedom and democracy in the Philippines but the solution must be non-violent.

"Since we're a Catholic country, the majority of our people are Christians. We are not prepared to use violence to change our government."

Aquino said a call for a boycott of national elections in the Philippines is gaining momentum.

"It is not so much that we're questioning whether it will be honest or not. The election is going to put members in a Parliament which we call a rubber stamp."

PARLIAMENT USELESS? The wide-ranging, legislative powers of the president makes the country's parliament meaningless and useless, he said.

Aquino told reporters that the main pressure tactic now is to isolate Marcos "further and further away from the people by rallying the people against him."

"Mr. Marcos right now is only staying in office because he has the military to back him up and, as perceived by many Filipinos, the military is supported by the United States.

"That is why the United States is being isolated little by little. It's not that we don't like the American people. We don't like American policies that support the dictator."

Asked to comment on the panel investigating his brother's death, Aquino said his family believes "this commission, which was created by the No. 1 suspect in the murder, cannot very well come out with an impartial investigation."

Meanwhile, in a nationally televised speech from the northern Philippine city of Baguio on Sunday, Marcos ridiculed opposition leaders who go "begging" in the United States for an end to American support of his regime.

Leaders who try to turn U.S. public opinion against him are embarrassing his country and should know that Americans have "no business" in Filipino politics, Marcos added.

Politicians seek vote

CHICAGO (CP) — Colorado Senator Gary Hart, former U.S. vice-president Walter Mondale and black preacher Jesse Jackson are bidding for the black vote in Tuesday's Illinois primary for Democratic presidential nomination.

The importance of black support was underlined during a televised debate Sunday when the three contenders jockeyed for position as the best civil rights advocate and tangled over racial divisions in Chicago's local politics.

They also made clear none of them would cut personal income taxes as they compared their campaign policies.

The live debate was held two days before the largest state primary vote held so far in the 1984 contest to pick a Democrat to run against President Reagan, a Republican, in the Nov. 8 election.

It showed the crucial nature of the large black vote in the state, especially Chicago, which could make or break a victory by Hart or Mondale.

Hart predicted he will attract black voters' support which has eluded him in other states so far by his economic proposals which show "the issue in the 1980s is not whether Rosa Parks rides in the front or the back of the bus but whether her son can own and operate the bus company."

DEFEAT REAGAN

Mondale claimed he has a superior record in civil rights and other issues of social justice. He considered himself the candidate who is "able to unite white, black and Hispanic across the board in a way that gives us the strength to win against Mr. Reagan."

Jackson, the first black to go the distance he has in a presidential primary, challenged his two white rivals to support his efforts to reform the election process in a way that will remove barriers to minority members to run for political office.

"I think the question that Mr. Hart and Mr. Mondale must answer is not programs for the blacks and the poor but the commitment to empower the blacks and the poor that they might develop programs for themselves."

Jackson was the only one of the three contenders to accept an invitation to appear at a pre-debate rally attended mostly by blacks. The rally was organized by Chicago Mayor Harold Washington to persuade people to go to the poll Tuesday and to promote his own slate of delegates for the national race as well as for a string of important local political positions.

Chronic disputes between Washington, elected Chicago's first black mayor last year, and Alderman Ed Vrdolyak, chairman of the influential Cook County Democratic party, have spilled over into the presidential primary campaign.

WELCOMES SUPPORT

During the debate, Mondale stood by his support last year of Washington's rival

Richard Daley and said he "welcomes" the endorsement of Vrdolyak and his Cook County political machinery. At the same time Mondale said he supports Washington and finds the Chicago divisions "very sad."

In controversial television ads, Hart has tried to alienate black voters from Mondale by linking him with Vrdolyak. Jackson tried to stay out of the fray. He said: "We must rise above these divisions and face the greater agenda of a unified Democratic party in 1984."

However, Jackson explained he has made a political arrangement with Washington. In exchange for "a nod" that falls short of a full endorsement from Washington, he said he agreed to share a slate of delegates with the mayor on the primary ticket.

Washington hopes to lead a group of uncommitted delegates to the Democratic party's national nominating convention in San Francisco, July 16-19. Party officials do not exactly agree on his strategy at sharing the delegates with Jackson as some of them are running against Jackson delegates.

SELECT DELEGATES

Voters participating in the Illinois primary cast a popular vote and help select 116 of 194 state delegates to the convention from 22 congressional districts.

They will also be voting in nominations for candidates for a variety of state legislature seats and county positions, ranging from a judgeship to members of a tax appeal board.

In state primaries and caucuses held to date, Hart has won the largest share of the popular vote but Mondale has collected more pledged delegates. Jackson trails third in both cases but has repeatedly laid historical claim to breakthroughs for a black candidate and has survived in the race while five others dropped out.

State primaries and caucuses are methods of selecting delegates to a party's national convention where a presidential candidate will be nominated.

A specific number of delegates is allocated to each state — national total 3,833 in the case of the Democrats — and the fight between candidates is to get as many committed delegates as possible.

Rules of primaries and caucuses differ in each state but the general distinction is this:

In a primary, voters elect delegates to the national convention either directly or by showing a preference for a presidential candidate. In primaries voters cast secret ballots the same as in a general election.

In caucuses, voters gather at local meetings and select delegates to a convention at a higher level — there are precincts, counties, districts and state conventions, depending on the state — who will in turn select delegates to the national convention.

Results of the first caucus in a state, even at the most local level, are generally projected onto the state level so they can be compared directly with the primary results.

Canadian skaters confident

OTTAWA (CP) — Paul Martini and Barbara Underhill are confident and Gary Beacom unrepentant as they head into the world figure skating championships in Ottawa this week.

Three-time national pairs champions, Martini and Underhill, Ont., and Underhill of Oshawa, Ont., are hoping to come back from a seventh place finish at the Olympic Games in Sarajevo, Yugoslavia, last month. They placed third at the 1983 world championships.

Beacom, of Toronto, was chastized by Olympic, International Skating Union and Canadian Figure Skating Association officials for kicking the arena boards and complaining at Sarajevo about the marks he received in the men's compulsory figures.

David Dore, president of the Canadian association and an Olympic judge, said Sunday at a reception: "As a judge I'm prohibited from commenting on the incident. But as Canadian president I cannot condone such action by anyone connected with the Canadian team.

"All our skaters and officials know the rules before they enter a competition, and we've spoken to Gary about Sarajevo," CHANCE NEEDED

But a few minutes later Beacom told reporters: "It's about time there was a reaction to the judges. I think it's healthy for any group to have some opposition and the skaters are, maybe, the one group that will get through to them."

"But the only people who can change the judging are the judges themselves."

"I'm going to be very curious how it will affect my marks this week. I expect there will be some judges who want to teach me a lesson, but I hope there will be others who look a little deeper into themselves when giving me my marks."

"I think necessarily, though, when you go against the system, you can't expect the system to support you with good marks."

"But it won't affect my performance. I have to go out and skate really well — that has to be my goal."

The big test for Beacom comes Tuesday morning when the men skate their compulsory figures before doing their short program Thursday and long, free skate Friday.

DESTROY CHANCES

Underhill fell during the short program at Sarajevo, destroying the pair's chances at a medal in one swoop. But, with a change of skates during practice since, she says she has found new confidence.

"Now Paul doesn't have to push me and pull me along any more," she said Sunday. "I can't explain the difference, it's just there."

"We've got over the disappointment of the Olympics and we're really ready to go for the worlds,"

Martini said. "We've had very good practices in Toronto and have regained our confidence."

Preparing to get married in July, he acknowledged the pair is thinking of retiring from amateur competition following the world championships.

"Of course we'd go together wherever it is. That's how we've built our reputation, as a pair."

Both agreed: as other Canadians have, that skating the world championships in Canada is going to be a big boost for them.

"Sure, there's a little added pressure," Martini said.

"But having that crowd behind you, knowing they want you to do well, makes a terrific difference," said Underhill. "We all really want to do well for them."

Competition opened today with women's compulsory figures. Pairs competition begins Tuesday and the dance event starts Thursday.

Johnson wins second title

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Chris Johnson, the second player in the history of the Ladies Professional Golf Association to win her first two titles consecutively, believes in keeping things in perspective.

"You'd like to think that everybody in the world knew about this tournament," she said Sunday after shooting a six-under-par 66 to win the $150,000 Tucson Conquistadores tournament.

"But you know what? Somebody told me that 600 million Chinese don't even know I played today."

Johnson won by six strokes, over Laurie Peterson, who had a final-round 71, and Becky Pearson finished third at 279 following a 71 Sunday.

Barb Bunkowsky of Campbellville, Ont., equalled the best-ever showing of her 15-month stint on the LPGA tour with a fourth-place finish. She fired a five-under 67 on the final round for a 280 total and won $8,250.

Rookie Lisa Young of Prince Rupert, B.C., finished in a tie for 12th place, winning $2,049 when her final-round 71 gave her a 285 total.

Judy Ellis of Kitchener, Ont., closed with a 73 for a 291 total, worth $887. Lynne Cooke of North Delta, B.C., was at 292, finishing with a 75 to win $730.

It was Johnson's second consecutive LPGA tour victory after a three-year dry spell. The 25-year-old Tucson native won the Samaritan Turquoise Classic in Phoenix last week and has now matched the feat of Nancy Lopez, who won her first tournaments back to back in 1978.

Lopez won five in a row her rookie year.

Johnson, a four-year pro, will be shooting for three straight at this week's Kemper Open in Maui.

"I haven't played well in Hawaii in the past," she said. "The weather is more humid, it's windy and the grass is different. Whether it'll happen again next week... well, who knows? I'm just happy with what I've done."

The former University of Arizona all-America posted a 18-under 272 total on her home course — the par-72, 6,346-yard Randolph North Golf Course — and won the $22,500 top prize.

"I had a bit of confidence today, but for the lowest 72-hole total. It makes a big difference when you know what you're doing out there."

"My confidence has really changed the last two weeks. I know when I swing, the ball is going to go where

I want it to go. I used to have the habit of looking up and watching my ball go so far off from where I lined up."

Peterson, aiming for her second career victory, birdied the last three holes for a one-under 71 and a 10-under 278 total. She won $8,750.

"On the 11th hole, I knew I was playing for second," Peterson, 23, said. "Slowly but surely, her lead got bigger. It was tough to accept, because I thought I could win."

Debbie Massey, co-leader with Johnson after the third round Saturday, had a 75 and finished tied for fifth at 281, along with Patty Sheehan, who had a par 72. Sheehan was a co-leader after the second round Friday.

Defending champion Jan Stephenson, experiencing more putting problems, had a 77 and finished at 288.

Koch leading money winner

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Gary Koch was a non-winner, frustrated and angry for six years on the Professional Golfers' Association tour.

"It got to be tough to look yourself in the eye in the mirror," Koch said.

But now, as the only two-time winner this season, he faces a new and much more pleasant problem.

"It's obvious I'm somewhat ahead of schedule," Koch said after a spectacular display that gave him a playoff victory Sunday over George Burns in the Bay Hill Classic.

"I'll have to take some time off, re-evaluate things, re-examine my goals, elevate them so that I have something to work for, so that I don't become complacent."

But that re-evaluation won't greatly change the schedule for Koch, who collected $72,000 from the total purse of $400,000 and is the leading money winner this year with a career-high $194,767.

Koch said teacher Peter Kostis helped him turn his game around in 1981. The comeback produced a victory early last season and has made Koch the game's most productive player.

In his two wins this season, he used an unorthodox formula: get six shots behind after three rounds, then, when no one is paying any attention, shoot the lights out.

He used it in the San Diego Open, where he trailed by six shots, but had a closing 65, then beat Gary Hallberg in a playoff.

On Arnold Palmer's Bay Hill course, he trailed by six after three rounds and "was just hoping to get a top 10 finish and a good cheque," he said.

But he produced his best effort as a pro, an eight-under-par 63, then birdied both playoff holes against Burns. It gave him 10 birdies in 20 holes.

The clincher was a three-foot putt on the second extra hole after Burns had taken three from the fringe.

"It's hard to beat those 63s," said Burns, who had compiled a last-round 67 to tie Koch at the end of regulation play at 272, 12 under par.

"Like I usually play, I had a lot of birdies, made a lot of mistakes," said Burns, who had an eagle, five birdies and three bogeys Sunday.

PGA champion Hal Sutton, Greg Norman of Australia, Bernhard Langer of West Germany, Ray Floyd and Sammy Nicksall all led or were within a stroke of the lead at one point or another over the final round.

Langer, who had an eagle-two, six birdies and three bogeys in a 66, was third at 273.

Sutton was fourth at 275 with a closing 73, and Nicksall, with a 70, was at 276.

Norman had a 73 and was tied at 277 with Floyd, who finished with a par 71.

Shoemaker wins 200th race

Veteran jockey Bill Shoemaker won his 200th race worth $100,000 or more, but the victory Sunday wasn't a happy one.

Shoemaker guided Avigation to a 2½-length victory in the $150,000 Santa Ana Handicap before a crowd of 47,597 at Santa Anita, but the race was marred by a three-horse spill.

One horse died during the race and another was destroyed later after a three-horse spill. Jockey Fernando Toro suffered facial cuts and a concussion and was taken to hospital, track officials said.

High Haven, who broke a foreleg while running in the clear on the first turn, got up after the accident and galloped to the backstretch but was destroyed because of the extent of her injuries.

Another horse involved in the mishap, Sweet Diane, apparently suffered a broken neck in the fall and was dead when veterinarians reached her.

Royal Heroine, the other horse who fell, suffered only scratches, track officials said.

Jockeys Ray Sibille and Laffit Pincay, aboard High Haven and Sweet Diane, respectively, were treated at the track and released.

BREAKS DOWN

High Haven was near the lead when she broke down and the other two horses couldn't avoid her. Avigation escaped the accident and went to the outside to pass the early leaders and finally pulled away under pressure in the final sixteenth.

Avigation, carrying 118 pounds, covered the 1¼ miles on turf in 1:48-25 and paid $15.80, $8 and $4.40.

The win in the race for older horses was worth $93,600.

Pride of Rosewood, ridden by Ron Warren and carrying 116 pounds, finished second, 1¼ lengths in front of L'Attrayante, and returned $23.20 and $7.40.

L'Attrayante, ridden by Eddie Delahoussaye and carrying 122 pounds, was three-quarters of a length ahead of Spit Curl at the finish and paid $3.40 to show.

Other finishers were Triple Tiddle and Brindy Brindy. My Native Princess was scratched.

WINS RUTHLESS

At Aqueduct, Given, $19.20, ridden by Matthew Vigliotti, overtook tiring pacesetter Maharadon in the stretch to win the $70,000 Ruthless Stakes for three-year-old fillies by 3¼ lengths.

Wild Again, $34.50, caught Explosive Bid in the final strides to score a neck victory in the $200,000 New Orleans Handicap.

On Saturday, longshot Darn That Alarm led all the way in winning the 11-16-mile $122,000 Fountain of Youth at Gulfstream Park by one length over Counterfeit Money, who was another length in front of Swale, a winner of four consecutive stakes coming into the race.

Darn That Alarm, which cocked 1:43, returned $81.40. Secret Prince finished 2¼ lengths in front of The Wedding Guest in the $138,800 Bay Shore at Aqueduct for his second win in two starts this year. Both are Derby nominees.

Secret Prince, owned by Elaine Brodsky, overcame Wedding Guest with less an eighth of a mile to go and won in 1:11-5. The winner, ridden by Craig Perret, got 12 pounds from The Wedding Guest, who carried 126.

Bold Southerner, a Kentucky Derby nominee, led most of the way and held off a closing rush by Rexson's Hope also a derby nominee, in winning the 11-16-mile, $160,000 Tampa Bay-Budweiser Derby. The winner, ridden by Wayne Crews and carrying 116 pounds, was timed in 1:43-5. He paid $179.40.

Biloxi Indian, $3.30, won his fourth straight race, scoring by six lengths over A Royal Bid, in the 11-16-mile, $104,000 HITS Parade Derby in 1:44-5 at the New Orleans Fair Grounds. Biloxi Indian is nominated for the derby.

Arctic games

YELLOWKNIFE, N.W.T. (CP) — Elderly native dancers in beaded mocassins and fur-trimmed velvet tunics stole the show Sunday night, winning spirited applause from nearly 1,000 young athletes at a ceremony to open the Arctic Winter Games.

The festive mood that has been hinting to sweep the city broke loose as athletes and spectators jamming the community centre whooped, hollered, whistled and clapped.

The athletes, who will participate in a variety of sports from the traditional two-foot kick to speed skating and hockey, were generous with their applause.

Even politicians, including Celine Hervieux-Payette, federal minister of state for youth, were treated to whistles and cheers.

A hoard of volunteers has been busy the last several months organizing the Games, which last five days and are held every two years.

For the last week, nearly all the talk in Yellowknife has dealt with the Games, being held here for the second time.

By the time a 747 jet carrying 300 athletes from Alaska touched down Sunday — the first jumbo jet to land at Yellowknife airport — Games fever was infectious.

DALLAS (AP) — A group of 12 investors led by Dallas businessman H. R. (Bum) Bright has bought Dallas Cowboys of the National Football League, published reports indicate.

The agreement will be submitted Monday to a meeting of NFL owners in Honolulu, the Dallas Morning News and the Fort Worth Star-Telegram say.

One hangup could be an NFL rule requiring one person to own 51 per cent of a franchise, both newspapers report. The Star-Telegram placed the sale price at "about $75 million," while The News said the price was $80 million.

The Star-Telegram says league owners will be asked to change the rule, while The News says the deal has been structured to give Cowboys president Tex Schramm a voting trust that would give him control of the club.

NICE, France (Reuter) — Serafin Viera of France won the Nice Marathon in two hours, 20 minutes, 56 seconds Sunday.

Patrick Monturo of Montreal placed second, finishing the 42.195-kilometre distance in 2:21.20.

MOSCOW (AP) — Vassil Smyslov, who trails Garri Kasparov 3-1 in the chess match to determine the challenger to world champion Anatoly Karpov, requested and received a postponement of their fifth game Sunday.

Tass, the official Soviet news agency, said the game was rescheduled for Tuesday. Each contestant is allowed to ask for two postponements.

The all-Soviet contest is being held in the Lithuanian capital of Vilnius.

The match opened March

10 and the first two games were drawn. Kasparov, 20, won handily in the third game.

In the fourth game Friday, Kasparov manoeuvred into a strong position against his opponent. The game was adjourned on the 41st move with Kasparov one pawn up and in a strong position to attack Smyslov. Smyslov, 62, conceded Saturday, Tass said.

A total of 8½ points is needed to win, with each draw counting a half point and a victory one point.

Chess postponed

Penticton trailed 4-2 heading into the third period but scored three times in just over three minutes to take a 5-4 lead. But Shawn Harrison scored at the 13:46 mark for the Summerland to tie the game, forcing the overtime period.

Brent Mowery, Ward Carlson and Tom Benson also scored for the Summerland.

Brett Hull scored twice for the Knights, while Ian Kidd, Murray Winnicki and Rod Poindexter added singles.

Mark Taylor made 31 saves for Summerland, while Mike Jeffrey stopped 37 shots for Penticton.

playing against Langley because you always know you have to be ready. They have a lot of talent but talent can only go so far. You have to work at it."

Nanaimo goalie Ken Trousseau made 28 saves, while Langley's Scott Bradley was credited with 38 stops.

In Penticton Saturday, Albert Anthony's second goal of the game at 5:30 of sudden-death overtime gave the Bucks their win over the Knights.

Blues end Capitals streak

St. Louis Blues' aren't taking the easy road to a National Hockey League playoff berth.

The Blues ended Washington's eight-game unbeaten string Sunday night at Landover, Md., with a 5-3 victory over the Capitals, who blew a chance to move ahead of first-place New York Islanders in the Patrick Division.

The Islanders, who lead Washington by one point, lost 5-4 Sunday to Hartford Whalers.

In other games, Edmonton Oilers beat Buffalo Sabres and Calgary Flames edged Winnipeg Jets by 4-3 scores and Minnesota North Stars tied Quebec Nordiques 5-5.

On Saturday it was Washington 3 Islanders 1, Philadelphia Flyers 6 New York Rangers 4, Buffalo 5 Vancouver Canucks 2, New Jersey Devils 5 Boston Bruins 3, Montreal Canadiens 6 Toronto Maple Leafs 1, Edmonton 9 Los Angeles Kings 1, Minnesota 4 Detroit Red Wings 3, Quebec 6 St. Louis 4, and Pittsburgh Penguins 4 Hartford 2.

"We're not going in the back door," coach Jacques Demers said of the Blues, who are second in the Norris Division but are battling Detroit Red Wings, Chicago Black Hawks and Toronto Maple Leafs for a playoff berth.

"We've beat Minnesota twice, beat Philadelphia and one of the great teams in the NHL here in Washington."

GOAL SHORTHANDED

A shorthanded goal by

Brian Sutter at 6:30 of the third period gave the Blues the victory Sunday.

It was their seventh win in their last 10 games, but only their eighth road triumph this season.

St. Louis plays four of its last five games on the road. Rookie centre Doug Gilmour put the Blues ahead at 2:23 of the first period. Washington made it 1-1, but the Blues' Bernie Federko scored his 38th goal at 4:50 of the second period and assisted on a goal by Joe Mullen at 5:41 that made it 3-1.

Washington's Darren Veitch, in the second period, and Bobby Carpenter, in the third, scored to tie it 3-3. But Sutter and Gilmour broke past the Washington defence to put the Blues ahead 4-3.

Guy Chouinard added an unassisted goal at 14:42 of the final period.

The goal ended a 38-game streak in which Washington, which has the league's best defensive record, had held its opponents to four goals or less.

Whalers 5 Islanders 4

Randy Pierce's second goal tied the score, then Mark Johnson connected 26 seconds later with his second for Hartford. "We're not playing well and we'd better start before it's too late," New York coach Al Arbour said.

Oilers 4 Sabres 3

Mark Messier scored two third-period goals in the Oilers' win at home. Wayne Gretzky had no points, the third time this season he has failed to collect a point in a game. Pat Hughes and Dave Hunter also scored for Edmonton. Sean McKenna, Hannua Virta and Phil Housley had Buffalo's goals.

Flames 4 Jets 3

Goalkeeper Reggie Lemelin made 38 saves and the visiting Flames built an early lead to withstand Winnipeg's three-goal third period. It was the sixth one-goal game in the last seven for the visiting Flames.

Nordiques 5, North Stars 5

Peter Stastny scored with less than three minutes remaining to lift the Nordiques to the tie at Bloomington; Minn. Steve Payne scored twice and Mark Napier had three assists for Minnesota, which is unbeaten in eight games.

Stacey Cook of Caledonia leaps way up for this lay in, as Caledonia rallies from a 22 point deficit in this game against Okanagan Mission in the provincial high school basketball championship on Friday. Caledonia won the game in overtime 100-94, and finished eighth in the tournament.

Juvenile, Northern B.C. champs

The Terrace Chrysler Juvies can proudly call themselves Northern B.C. champs after they defeated the Peace-Caribou representative Ft. St. John in two games over the weekend.

Terrace opened with a 9-3 win Friday night. Mario Desjardins, on loan from the Totem Ford, Midgets, got three goals for Terrace. Dave Kawinsky and Tony Jakubowski each had two goals and Don Wiley and Lyle Marleau added singles.

There was a bit of hockey politics going on Saturday morning when St. Ft. John refused to play the scheduled 10:00 a.m. game, citing a rule that states a team doesn't have to play before 2 p.m. in a championship game. The President of the B.C. hockey association was consulted and the Ft. St. John team was ordered back onto the ice. The game got underway one and a half hours late.

In Saturday's game it was Terrace all the way. The team led 5-1 after the first, 8-1 after two, and finished with a final score of 10-4. Rod Philpot had a hat-trick, Kawinsky and Wayne Cox each had a pair, and Marleau, Steve Turner, and Rod Ebeling each added one.

The Juvies are now scheduled to meet the Kootenys' zone representative in Terrace next weekend but rumour has it that financial problems may keep the Kooteney team at home.

The provincial final is set for the March 29-31 weekend. In Prince George on Sunday, Totem Ford midgets played to a 4-4 tie against Ft. St. John in the midget provincial championship. The team will play their second game today against North Shore Winter club.

Oakland Invaders and Washington Federals, both winless four games into the United States Football League season despite being guided by new blood, are at least showing signs of life.

The Invaders lost 28-7 Sunday to Philadelphia Stars, but new coach Chuck Hutchison of Oakland said he was impressed with the team's performance.

"For 58 minutes, we were a good football team," said Hutchison. "Then we got sloppy on both offence and defence."

Washington came even closer, allowing a field goal and an interception touchdown return in the final two minutes to lose to Pittsburgh Maulers 16-7.

"It really hurts," said coach Dick Bielski of Washington.

"We play inspired and worked our tails off for 58 minutes of great football and come up empty. We're short on talent, but have plenty of guts. Defensively, we were super. We made them pay for everything they got."

STILL UNBEATEN

Also on Sunday defending champion Michigan Panthers remained one of two unbeaten teams with a 31-26 victory over Arizona Wranglers.

Gambler beat New Jersey Generals 32-25 and Denver Gold downed Tampa Bay Bandits 36-30. It was the first loss for New Jersey and Tampa.

Unbeaten New Orleans Breakers play the Bulls at Jacksonville tonight.

On Saturday it was: Birmingham Stallions 54, Memphis Showboats 6, Los Angeles Express 13, San Antonio Gunslingers 12 and Oklahoma Outlaws 17, Chicago Blitz 14.

The Stars moved into a first-place tie with New Jersey in the Atlantic Division as Kelvin Bryant rushed for 173 yards and third-quarter touchdowns of four and two yards against the Invaders at Philadelphia.

At Washington, Tony Lee kicked a tie-breaking 18-yard field goal with 1:56 remaining and Jeff Delaney raced 90 yards with an interception 30 seconds later as the Maulers posted their first triumph. Lee's field goal was set up by a 62-yard pass from Glenn Carano to Heisman Trophy winner Mike Rozier, who rushed 22 times for 77 yards and caught three passes for 87 more.

EXTENDS STREAK

At Pontiac, Mich., Bobby Hebert fired three touchdown passes, two to Derek Holloway, as Michigan extended its winning streak to 10 games over the last two seasons. Hebert hit Holloway on a 10-yard TD pass in the first quarter and a 60-yarder in the third period — Holloway turned a 10-yard curl pattern into a long gainer — and also flipped a 13-yarder to Mike Cobb in the third quarter.

Sam Harrell scored two touchdowns and cornerback

Will Lewis intercepted two passes, returning one 34 yards for a touchdown and the other 13 yards to set up a one-yard run by Harrell at Houston. Harrell scored his first touchdown on a five-yard run after Jim Kelly, who completed 22 of 38 passes for 271 yards, fired a 29-yard pass to Gerald McNeil and a 12-yard pass to Greg Moser.

Cornerback David Martin picked off a John Reaves sideline pass and returned it 38 yards for a touchdown with 6:34 left in the game at Denver. Martin's score came 37 seconds after quarterback Craig Penrose of Denver threw a 13-yard touchdown pass to Leonard Harris that tied the score 30-30.

Churchill deserved better fate

Calgary Wrangler goaltender Chris Churchill deserved a better fate Sunday.

The young netminder made 46 saves but defenceman Mark Tinordi beat him four minutes into overtime as Lethbridge Broncos edged the Wranglers 3-2 in one of five Western Hockey League games.

Other action saw Victoria Cougars edge Portland Winter Hawks 8-7, Regina Pats bomb Winnipeg Warriors 10-0, Brandon Wheat Kings defeat Saskatoon Blades 6-4 and New Westminster Bruins nip Kamloops Oilers 6-5.

While Tinordi was the star of the moment, Churchill was the story of the game, said Bronco coach John Chapman.

"Churchill was definitely the player of the game for them," he said. "We should have had 10 goals instead of three."

The Broncos led 2-0 early in the second period on goals by J.C. McEwan and Cam Douglas.

The Wranglers made things interesting when defenceman Dana Murzyn's clearing shot from centre hit some debris in front of Bronco netminder Ken Wregget and bounced into the net. Landis Chaulk tied the game six minutes later.

"We went to sleep for a while in the second period after they scored that first goal and they jumped on us," Chapman said. "But, besides that, I thought we Stacy Pratt and Dave Thomlinson also scored for the Wheat Kings who led 3-2 and 5-4 by periods. The Blades got two goals from Wendel Clark with singles coming from Joey Kocur and Dale Henry.

COUGARS 8 WINTER HAWKS 7

The Cougar's playoff hopes remained alive as Leroy Remple scored his second goal of the night, with 44 seconds remaining, to let Victoria sneak past Portland.

Victoria now is one point behind fourth-place Seattle in the race for the Western Connie Roberts skates here in the Terrace figure skating club's 11th annual Ice Carnival. Roberts skated the feature solo of the Carnival which was titled T.V. Fantasia. Space Odyssey, Batman and Robin, Strawberry Shortcake, and the Smurfs were some of the skating presentations included in the two day show. Club spokesman Judy Tessaro said the Carnival went quite well. Everyone involved seem quite pleased and the audience seemed to enjoy themselves and appreciate the effort of the local skaters.

No place like home for Seattle's Sonics

There's no place like home for Seattle SuperSonics, who are anything but super when they hit the road.

Seattle, following its 126-99 rout Sunday night over Golden State Warriors — in Seattle, naturally — the SuperSonics boast a 27-3 won-lost record at home, but 8-25 on the road in the National Basketball Association.

In other games it was: Denver Nuggets 107, Chicago Bulls 104; Kansas City Kings 108, Cleveland Cavaliers 97; Milwaukee Bucks 109, Washington Bullets 101 and San Antonio Spurs 140, San Diego Clippers 136.

On Saturday it was: Boston Celtics 103, Atlanta Hawks 88; New York Knicks 123, Kansas City 109; Philadelphia 76ers 131, Phoenix Sun 112; New Jersey Nets 100, Indiana Pacers 98; Los Angeles

Lakers 123, Houston Rockets 111; Utah Jazz 118, Dallas Mavericks 103 and Portland Trail Blazers 133, Golden State Warriors 98.

Gus Williams scored 14 of his 28 points in the third quarter as Seattle pulled away in the second half to record its first victory in four tries against the Warriors this season.

Midway through the second quarter, the SuperSonics reeled off 12 consecutive points, six by Al Wood, to take a 50-38 lead with 4:14 to play in the first half. Joe Barry Carroll topped the Warriors with 24 points.

Nuggets 107, Bulls 104

Kiki Vandeweghe scored 15 of his 30 points in the final period as Denver maintained its hold on the eighth and final playoff spot in the Western Conference. Alex English scored 24 points and Dan Issel had 21 for Denver. Dailey led the Bulls with 19.

Kings 108, Cavaliers 97

Mike Woodson scored 27 of his 33 points in the second half as Kansas City overcame a 14-point disadvantage at halftime. Larry Drew finished with 21 points for Kansas City. Eddie Johnson had 18 points, as did Geoff Huston for Cleveland.

Bucks 109, Bullets 101

Junior Bridgeman scored five points during a 13-2 spurt at the start of the fourth quarter. The Bucks were led by Marques Johnson with 25 points, while Paul Pressey had 18 and Mike Dunleavy had a season-high 17. Greg Ballard led the Bullets with 25 points.

Spurs 140, Clippers 136

George Gervin scored 42 points, Mike Mitchell added 35 as San Antonio led from the opening moments. Norm Nixon led San Diego with 27 points, while Terry Cummings had 23.

Fernando DeMatthaeis, Chico Borja, Andrew Parkinson and Gerry Gray scored New York's other goals.

Peter Ward, David Norman, Mike Sweeney and Steve Nesin scored for Vancouver.

The Sockers play Vancouver Wednesday at Pacific Coliseum.

Whitecaps, out of a playoff spot, suffered their 20th loss in 30 games.

New York led 4-1 after the first period and held a comfortable 7-2 lead at half time.

Steve Moyers led Cosmos with three goals and two assists, while Dragan Vujovic added two goals and two assists.

Whitecaps suffer another loss

VANCOUVER (CP) — New York Cosmos moved into second place in the North American Soccer League indoor standings Sunday with a 9-4 win over Vancouver Whitecaps.

It was New York's 19th win against 11 losses and moved them to within one game of first-place San Diego Sockers. The

I was surprised that you didn't come up with better advice to the young woman whose fiancé decided that perhaps he wouldn't marry her when he discovered she was physically stronger. It seems he learned this when they were horsing around wrestling. She pinned him every time.

I am 5-feet-10 and weigh 150 pounds. My husband is 5-feet-6 and weighs 145. We have never wrestled, but we both know I could smash him like a grape if we ever got into a battle.

When a tire needs changing, I do it. If the piano needs moving, I move it. He even hands me the jars that are too hard to open. Nobody makes a big deal out of the fact that I am stronger physically. In fact, we make a joke of it.

Why? Because he's the sweetest guy in the whole world and maybe the smartest. The runt is a whiz at his job, makes an excellent salary and everybody loves him. So who cares that I've got the muscles in the back of my neck? You should have told the woman that if her man feels inferior because she can outwrestle him, he's got some squirrely values and to give him the ax. — Big Erma

You're onto something big, Sister. Thanks for writing.

Bad names

I had to write to express my feelings about the woman who said she was disgusted with receptionists, service people and other strangers who call her "Sugar," "Sweetie," "Darling," "Dear" and so on.

She should be thankful she lives in Los Angeles where folks are so dumb in this "Island Paradise."

I have been called "Stupid," "Hey You," "Birdbrain," "Dumb" and "Fatso." Some people don't know who they are well off. — Sounding Off In Honolulu

I have been to Honolulu many times and was always impressed by the gentleness and friendliness of the people there. What on earth do you do that irritates folks so?

ARIES

(Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Prospects improve career-wise, but expenses may mount. You should make every effort to keep your accounts in order. Balance checkbooks.

TAURUS

(Apr. 20 to May 20) Accent the positive in relations with others. Partners share responsibilities, but should do so with light heart.

GEMINI

(May 21 to June 20) A new job opportunity may mean an increased work load. Still, it's to your benefit. Dig in and apply yourself. Throw off self-doubt.

CANCER

(June 21 to July 22) Children are a source of happiness, but may require extra attention today. Be willing to assist a romantic interest with problems.

LEO

(July 23 to Aug. 22) Make extra space at home to accommodate work needs. Unexpected company may drop by. A parent asks for your assistance.

VIRGO

(Aug. 23 to Sept. 22) After some lighthearted moments, you'll settle down to serious intellectual work. An invitation for good times should be accepted.

LIBRA

(Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) You may come into a cash bonanza, but be sure to put some away for a rainy day. Bookkeeping and budgets should predominate.

SCORPIO

(Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Despite some happy news, you worry too much. Know the difference between being self-disciplined and being rigid.

SAGITTARIUS

(Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Some edginess exists with a close tie. Keep financial moves under wraps for now. Use leisure time constructively. Avoid escapism.

CAPRICORN

(Dec. 22 to Jan. 19) Social prospects improve, but a friend is likely to ask a favor of you. A family member is not in the mood for company.

AQUARIUS

(Jan. 20 to Feb. 18) Confidentiality aids you in career matters, though details about a project may need further work. Be tactful with superiors.

PISCES

(Feb. 19 to Mar. 20) Travel is a possibility now, but costs should be kept down. You may renew an old friendship. Double-check legal costs.

YOU BORN TODAY are diplomatic yet adventurous. You work well with others, but can be self-sufficient. You'd make a good physician and have a genuine interest in the welfare of others. You're often drawn to artistic pursuits, but at times can worry too much about finances. You're a progressive thinker and are quite intuitive. Good at telling stories, you would succeed as a writer. You have an interest in theater and can also succeed in brokerage. Birth date of: Michael Redgrave, actor; Hal Linden, actor; and Henrik Ibsen, playwright.

Prehistoric community unearthed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ruins unearthed in Chile indicate New World people lived in planned communities up to 14,000 years ago, suggesting they were socially advanced earlier than previously believed, a U.S. scientist said Monday.

Dr. Thomas Dillehay, an anthropologist at the University of Kentucky, said the site showing a planned community and diversified economy is the oldest found so far in the Western Hemisphere.

The complexity of the community, which includes the remains of at least 14 row-house structures, is even more intriguing considering man is generally believed to have arrived in the New World across a land bridge from Asia less than 20,000 years ago, he said.

Communities of this type and age are not uncommon in the Old World.

Dillehay, in a report to the National Science Foundation, which supports his work, said the settlement is at Monte Verde in southern Chile. The site is about 1,500 kilometres south of Santiago and 30 kilometres inland from the Pacific coast.

Dillehay and colleagues at the Southern University of Chile in Valdivia discovered the site in 1978 but did not begin a major excavation until January 1983. Most of the discoveries came from the most recent dig.

FOUND UNITS

Scientists found 14 rectangular foundations consisting of logs that had been staked into the ground. Each living unit was about 1.8 by three metres in size, had its own entrance and a shallow, clay-lined hearth pit in the ground.

Some of the units included fallen poles that had been used as side walls, and a few well-preserved 'pieces' of animal hide were attached to the logs and poles.

"All these architectural units are attached to each other, with one wall being used for two units," Dillehay said. "The whole complex reminds one of crudely laid-out modern row houses."

Radioactive carbon dating on charcoal and animal bones found around and in the dwelling units indicate they are between 12,500 and 14,000 years old, Dillehay said.

He said the site, which has distinct work and residential areas, appears to have been planned and not put together at random, indicating a sophistication not previously suspected of such populations at the time.

Dad's revenge

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — A father who killed his son's accused kidnapper "couldn't distinguish between right and wrong" when he stepped from a telephone booth and shot the man in the head, a lawyer for the father said.

Gary Plache was released today after a Baton Rouge businessman put up $10,000 property bond. Bond for Plache, who has known the businessman, Walter Wall, for 33 years, had been set at $100,000 on a charge of second-degree murder.

Defence lawyer Foster Sanders said no further court appearance would be required until a grand jury indicts Plache, if one does. District Attorney Ossie Brown said he probably would present evidence to the grand jury March 28.

WBRZ-TV had a camera rolling Friday night when Plache, 39, stepped from a pay telephone at Ryan Airport and fired once into the head of Jeffery Paul Doucet, 25, as unsuspecting detectives were walking Doucet past a metal detector.

After the shooting, the detectives asked Plache why he shot Doucet and he replied: "If it were your son, you would have done the same thing," police and witnesses said.

Doucet, who died Saturday at New Orleans Charity Hospital, was being returned to Baton Rouge from Anaheim, Calif., where FBI agents arrested him in a hotel room Feb. 29 and freed Plache's 12-year-old son, Jody.

KARATE INSTRUCTOR

Doucet, the child's karate instructor, took Jody from the Plaches' home on Feb. 19 and, when they did not return, Jody's mother reported her son kidnapped.

"Mr. Plache was driven by an overwhelming and unending concern and love of a parent for a child, having heard very serious allegations about what happened to his son while he was actually kidnapped by the alleged kidnapper," Sanders told WAFB-TV Sunday night.

"He was obsessed with what he believed had happened to his son. He had a distorted sense of what was right. That obviously is going to be the defence, that he couldn't distinguish between right and wrong."

The shooting, which Sanders called "violent and inexcusable," was "in no way an indication of the Gary Plache I've known all my life," he said.

Sanders said more than just a kidnapping was behind Doucet's "act of desperation," but said: "I think it would be inappropriate for me to speak about that now."

New Democrats contest election

MONTREAL (CP) — The Quebec wing of the New Democratic Party, which has never won a seat in any election, decided Sunday to set up a party to contest Quebec provincial elections.

The 120 delegates attending a weekend policy convention of the party's Quebec section approved a resolution giving the provincial council permission to call a founding convention "as soon as possible."

John Harney, defeated in campaigns for the party's national leadership in 1971 and 1975, was elected as the Quebec wing's new president.

He said it is unlikely the NDP will have time to establish a provincial party in time to present candidates in the next Quebec election — expected next year. It will also wait until after the next federal election.

Party officials noted the council could not decide on its own to create a provincial party until it had received a wider mandate through consulting more members.

They said they hope a new party will appeal to "progressive" Quebecers such as trade unionists and members of municipal political parties.

The Quebec wing of the NDP ran a dozen candidates in the 1970 provincial election and about 20 in the 1976 election in co-operation with trade unions.

PARTY MUST RUN

Harney, a Quebec-born professor at York University in Toronto, said it is essential for the party's credibility to run provincial candidates "to bring a socialist point of view to Quebec life."

He said the party has to work at the grassroots level, with NDP candidates for the next federal election coming from the communities where they run.

"Not since 1972 has the party made a real effort in Quebec," Harney said.

"This year, we may not have a candidate in each of the 75 (federal) ridings, but our candidates will come from the community and will be involved in their surroundings."

While acknowledging the party's weakness in Quebec, Harney said the NDP is the "trustee of important ideas — social democracy — but also, when you think of the party's beginnings, the concept of two nations."

Harney said the NDP in Quebec will concentrate in the next few months on unemployment and job creation, which he called the daily preoccupations of Quebecers.

A former provincial secretary of the Ontario New Democratic Party, Harney was member of Parliament for the Toronto riding of Scarborough West from 1972 to 1974.

Johnson optimistic

REGINA (CP) — Liberal leadership candidate Don Johnston swept optimistically through three Prairie cities during the weekend, preaching parliamentary reform and peace while forecasting hard times for the Progressive Conservatives.

Johnston, a Montreal tax lawyer, drew applause from his audiences when he criticized Tory Leader Brian Mulroney and stressed his commitment to Prime Minister Trudeau's peace initiative.

The federal minister of economic development told 200 Calgary Liberals on Saturday that Mulroney was a "very scared politician" for describing the leadership race as a ploy to make Canadians forget about the party's record in government.

"We will ride through the convention and go on to win the election with ease," said Johnston, wearing an oversized cowboy hat. "If I was Mr. Mulroney, I would be having a lot of sleepless nights."

It was a theme he repeated Sunday in a speech to 100 people at the annual meeting of the Regina East Liberal constituency association.

Johnston, one of four leadership hopefuls to declare their candidacy for the June 14-17 convention in Ottawa, said the race to succeed Trudeau has "energized" the Liberal party.

"I think it's important that we have a hotly contested convention and that we don't have a runaway race as the media now tells us we're going to have," he said, in a veiled reference to Friday's addition of John Turner to the leadership race.

"I think it's in the interest of the party, the country and in my own interest," Johnston said, laughing.

He said parliamentary reform is needed to give

Canadians, especially those in the West, a feeling that they are taking part in policy-making decisions.

Johnston also suggested that economic development policies, based on co-operation with the provinces, should be tailored to meet regional needs.

He did not elaborate in his address or in a brief chat with reporters while on his way to private meetings with potential delegates.

On Saturday in Edmonton, Johnston began his two-day visit to the region by suggesting some parliamentary procedures be changed to allow free votes in the House of Commons and to strengthen the committee system.

While in the Alberta capital, Johnston also touched on the potential for using "national parks" to promote tourism and pledged his support for soil and water research to help agriculture.

Munroe moves for French in Yukon

YELLOWKNIFE, N.W.T. (CP) — Northern Affairs Minister John Munroe plans to introduce legislation to provide government services in French to residents of the Northwest Territories and the Yukon.

In a surprise move that caught northerners off guard, Munroe announced his intentions Sunday at a news conference after meeting with government leaders from the two Territories.

Under the proposed legislation, the Territorial acts would be amended to allow for French translation of government documents, court and legislative assembly proceedings and services of government agencies.

"We're not cramming French down everybody's throat in the Yukon and I certainly hope people won't jump to those conclusions," Munroe told reporters.

The move was prompted by a Yukon man, Daniel St. Jean, who fought a traffic ticket because it was written in English, arguing that it violated the language provisions in the Charter of Rights and Freedoms.

The Territorial court convicted him, ruling that the language rights section of the Charter does not apply to the Yukon because it is not "an institution" of Parliament.

LAUNCHES APPEAL

St. Jean has appealed the conviction and his case is scheduled to be heard Thursday.

Munroe said he would introduce the legislation this week before St. Jean's court case in the hope of avoiding the chaos that could ensue if he wins the appeal. A victory by St. Jean could force each piece of legislation to be challenged before the courts.

In that case, all ordinances of the Territorial government could be interpreted as being invalid, Munroe said.

For example, people might refuse to pay their taxes.

Chris Pearson, leader of the Yukon Progressive Conservative government, suggested Munroe's move is a bid for "buying votes in Quebec."

"This is a direct intrusion," Pearson said. "It's back to the colonial days, only worse than before."

The legislation will not apply to education in French, which has been sought by a tiny but vocal group of French-speaking Yukon residents.

Francophones make up less than 10 per cent of the 75,000 people in the two Territories.

CITES NEED

The legislation is required "urgently" to avoid a repeat of the "very unhappy Manitoba situation," Munroe said.

"They threw it back in the courts. I happen to believe that strengthens the cause of separatism in the province of Quebec and I hate to see the ugly spectre raised again because we're not prepared to carry through on the Constitution with respect to two official languages."

Munroe promised federal money for education in native languages for Indians and Inuit, who make up the majority of the Territories' population.

"We're prepared to back them up to avoid any kind of backlash."

However, Denis Gadoury, a spokesman for L'Association culturelle franco-terre, said he doesn't expect natives to be angered by francophone gains.

"The languages are different, but it's the same cause," said Gadoury. "We're both working to get our own languages recognized."

Police protect British miners

LONDON (AP) — Police reinforcements moved into the British Midlands today and 8,000 officers were put on alert throughout the country to protect working miners from pickets arriving from strike-bound pits in defiance of a court order.

The police operation, at the start of the second week of a partial strike by miners, is the largest since Britain's bitter 1926 General Strike.

The so-called Flying Pickets trying to enter the Nottinghamshire coalfields faced 3,000 police, including officers trained in riot control.

Police manned checkpoints at roads and railway stations, stopping pickets from strike-hit Yorkshire, Scotland, Kent and South Wales coalfields from invading the mines still open.

The 34,000 miners at Nottinghamshire in central England, Britain's second most productive coal region, voted 3-1 Saturday to go to work, dramatizing the bitter divisions in the 183,000-member, leftist-led National Union of Mineworkers.

ALSO IGNORE CALL

Union members in Lancashire, the Midlands, Derbyshire, Cumberland and North Wales also voted to work despite a strike call by miners in Scotland and in Yorkshire, the country's largest mining area, to protest the state-owned National Coal Board's announcement that 20 unprofitable mines will be closed. The closures will force 20,000 out of work in the next 12 months.

The police action, ordered by the government to try to keep some of Britain's 174 mines open, was being directed from the 14th floor of police headquarters at Scotland Yard.

"We are determined to ensure that the rule of law and order is maintained and that those people who wish to go to work can do so," Chief Constable David Hall of the Humberside force in eastern England told reporters.

In a nine-day general strike in 1926, police mobilized thousands of officers. That strike, called in May by the Trades Union Congress in response to a national lockout of the miners by coal workers in a pay dispute, lasted nine days when the congress capitulated. But the miners stayed out until November, when hunger forced them back. Britain's mines were nationalized in 1946.

TRAVEL BY BUS

Hall, who is heading the operation, sent police in buses to the English Midlands coalfields from London.

Chief Constable Peter Joslin of Warwickshire, where four pits are open, warned that his men would use "aggressive action against intimidation."

Despite the patrols, about 100 pickets from South Wales showed up at Thoresby colliery in Nottinghamshire. They said they had slept in cars hidden in Sherwood Forest and then walked a few kilometres to the pit.

The police action follows a High Court injunction last week against Yorkshire miners picketing in other areas — a practice known as Flying Pickets.

Legislation passed in 1980 outlaws picketing of workplaces not directly involved in a dispute. Those defying the law face heavy fines, which if not paid can force the seizure of regional union assets.

If some mines stayed open through the week, the union executive, led by militant leftist Arthur Scargill, was expected to seek a strike vote by calling a national delegate conference or holding a national ballot.

An overtime ban over a rejected pay offer has hurt the 60,000 miners who normally work overtime. They have lost an estimated $67 million ($123 million Canadian) in the 20 weeks the ban has been in effect.

Valuable autographs

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The actual signatures of presidents Abraham Lincoln and John Kennedy are valuable, but serious collectors will pay more for those of their assassins, John Wilkes Booth and Lee Harvey Oswald, respectively, experts say.

Also, an autograph by rock music's Michael Jackson sells for $25 at best while the highest-priced autograph of any living person is that of Iran's Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, whose signature goes for about $800.

Cuban President Fidel Castro's autograph is worth about $575, says Herman Darvick, president of the 1,500-member Universal Autograph Collectors Club, which held a convention attended by about 125 people Sunday at a Hollywood hotel.

Darvick, a fifth-grade teacher, says autograph hounds include Roman writer Cicero 2,000 years ago, who was reported to have bragged about a hand-written letter he had received from Julius Caesar.

QUEEN COLLECTS

Queen Victoria collected autographs, as did U.S. presidents James Madison and Franklin Roosevelt.

"It's slowly catching on," Darvick, 38, said of the hobby as he watched fellow enthusiasts selling, buying, swapping and sharing views on whose signature is hot and whose is not.

"Like any other hobby, people do it for different reasons. See this letter signed by Teddy Roosevelt? You can't get any closer to Teddy than this. He touched this paper. His thoughts went down on it. It's like a frozen moment in history."

The most valuable signature apparently belongs to the U.S. president whose time in office was shortest. Last year, a wealthy collector paid a record $132,000 for a hand-written letter from President William Henry Harrison, who served only 31 days in office before he died.

Police News

TERRACE — Friday night was a busy night for Terrace RCMP with three incidents occurring within two hours of each other.

At 1:30 a.m. on March 17, the front door of the Terrace Curling Rink was smashed in. Damage was estimated to be approximately $250.

At 2:30 a.m. of the same morning, a fight erupted in the parking lot of Jezebel's Cabaret. Two Terrace men were arrested and charged with escaping lawful custody and assaulting a peace officer are pending against one of them.

Approximately 45 minutes later, at 3:15 a.m., a single motor-vehicle accident occurred near the intersection of Kotof Road and Highway 16 East.

The lone occupant of the vehicle, a Terrace resident, was not injured when his vehicle rolled several times. Charges of impaired driving and driving with a blood alcohol count exceeding .08 are pending. Damage is estimated to be $2,000.

At approximately 2:50 a.m. on Sunday, police had discovered a break and entry with theft had occurred at the Terrace Soup Kitchen. The theft took place in the building where proceeds from Saturdays food drive were being stored. The only article reported stolen at this point is a case of canned meat. Police are continuing the investigation.

Q. Whatever happened to Jane Greer? She was one of the most beautiful and talented actresses of the 1940s and '50s but I haven't

A. As a matter of fact, she will. The 58-year-old Greer, who once was married to crooner Rudy Vallee, is making a return to films in "Against All Odds" starring Rachel Ward and Jeff Bridges. What makes this even more interesting is that Jane starred in "Out of the Past" in 1947, which was based on the same book as "Against All Odds." In that one she had the Rachel Ward role; now she plays Rachel's mother.

Q. I understand Jessica Lange and playwright-actor Sam Shepard are quite a couple. — both onscreen and off. How does this affect them when they are acting together? — T.T.

A. Well, those who've seen the rushes of their now-filming "Country" report the Lange-Shepard drama about a contemporary farm family may be one of the most romantic films of the year. Their offscreen romance is translating into an onscreen chemistry that has the celluloid smoldering.

Q. Is there really going to be a sequel to "2001: A Space Odyssey"? It's my favorite movie and I've heard they're making another, but so far no film. — K.K.

A. "2001: Odyssey Two" will definitely be a movie theatre near you by Christmas 1984. The movie sequel is being based on the book sequel by Arthur C. Clarke and will star Roy Scheider and John Lithgow. I can't tell you much more, however, because it's being filmed in top secrecy. Incidentally, Clarke has a new book, just published, called "1984: Spring." It's based on Clarke's essays about modern technological life and George Orwell's theories.

Q. Let's be honest. Isn't Bette Midler washed up as a movie star? — G.S.

Quite honestly, not by a long shot. Granted Bette's recent films — both her solo show vehicle and an unfortunate item titled "Jinxed" — went nowhere. But the Divine One isn't giving up. After a stint writing and promoting a book ("The Sage of Baby Divine"), Bette's back in Hollywood. She has a new record coming out. Also, she's mulling over several movie projects. One, "Poor Little Rich Girl," would have her working with none other than Joan Rivers. The duo would certainly make sparks fly but I wonder who would get the last laugh.

Q. Will Terry Moore ever tell the full story of his brief but profitable marriage to billionaire Howard Hughes? — J.B.

A. She certainly will. Terry just sold her book telling perhaps more than we wanted to know about her famous liaison with Hughes. It'll be published by Simon & Schuster under the title, "The Beauty and the Billionaire." You'll recall that last year, Terry told the world that in 1949 she married Hughes aboard a yacht. As a result, she said, she's now his legal widow. The Hughes estate settled Moore's claim with a substantial payment in the eight-figure range. Terry's book is expected to be turned into a TV movie, so get set for plenty of adventure with the well-off beauty and billionaire.

Q. I haven't noticed any newspaper photos of Amy Irving and Steven Spielberg together lately in the gossip pages. Are they still considered an item? — A.K.

A. Very much so. On a recent Manhattan afternoon, Steven, the gifted director of the forthcoming "Indiana Jones and the Temple of Doom," and Amy, the lovely actress now starring in the movie "Yentl" and the Broadway play "Heartbreak House," were seen strolling arm in arm along the East Side — Spielberg wearing a "Raiders"-style leather bomber jacket. Although approached several times for autographs, the pair continued ambling and gazing into each other's eyes; not out of rudeness, but because they seemed too rapt (and wrapped) up in each other to notice anybody else.

Incidentally, Clarke has a new book, just published, called "1984: Spring." It's based on Clarke's essays about modern technological life and George Orwell's theories.

Q. Over the years, I have been fascinated by the Anastasia riddle. You know, the daughter of the Russian tsar who was supposed to have escaped when the rest of her family was assassinated. What's the latest on her? — B.A.

A. This mystery has been going on ever since the 1918 massacre of the Russian royal family at Ekaterinburg. There have been many movies about it, notably "Anastasia," starring Ingrid Bergman, and, of course, the woman many allege to be Anastasia, Anna Anderson Manahan, still lives in Virginia. The latest wild rumor is that two of the tsar's daughters — not Anastasia, but Olga and Maria — survived. And supposedly Olga left documents with an Italian doctor which may solve the mystery once and for all. At least, that's the story this week.

Q. How many times has Goldie Hawn been married? And who is she seeing now? — S.C.

A. Goldie has been married twice, the first time to director Gus Trikonis. Her second husband was the singing Hudson brother, Bill. She has two children, Oliver and Kate. Goldie lives alone with her family at the California beach colony of Malibu. She's been seen as a newly enlisted U.S. Marine, and Elizabeth her co-star in "Swing Shift." Goldie's latest movie which comes out this spring. I'll keep you posted on this budding romance.

Q. I heard they are making a movie about the discovery of a dinosaur in Africa. Is this based on a real event? If so, I'm surprised it hasn't made headlines all over the world. — N.O.N

A. You're right, it would have made headlines — if it had happened. The movie you're thinking of is called "Baby" and is currently being filmed by Walt Disney Studios. It's based on a completely fictitious script by Clifford and Ellen Green, but the idea is not as far-fetched as it seems. There is a branch of scientists called cryptozoologists who believe that dinosaur-like creatures may still exist in the innermost recesses of the African Congo.

Q. Every movie I go to seems to have pot smoking in it. I have some impressionable children at home and I'd like them to go see some of these films, but I don't want them to start smoking the stuff just because they see movie stars doing it. — H.D.

A. It's unlikely that your children would be persuaded to smoke marijuana just from what they see in movies. Peer pressure and family environment are much more important. But I agree, many movies — even the best films like "Silkwood," "The Big Chill" and "Terms of Endearment" — have pot

Q. What's this about Barbara Streisand falling for playwright Neil Simon? Is someone pulling my leg? — S.A.

A. Sounds silly, but who knows? Simon, of course, is recently divorced from actress Marsha Mason. Barbara just ended a longtime liaison with boyfriend Jon Peters. What's more, Barbara and Neil started off 1984 by having a dinner date after which Simon said simply: "She's terrific." Neil even says they might eventually work on a movie together.

Q. I always seem to be getting those two wonderfully starchy actresses, Mildred Natwick and Mildred Dunnock, a bit mixed up. Have they ever met? — H.D.

More than that, they've acted together! Mildred Natwick, who's now 75, has appeared in such memorable pictures as "The Long Voyage Home," "The Quiet Man" and "Barefoot in the Park," and has also starred as one of "The Snoop Sisters" in the TV series. Mildred Dunnock, who's 78, acted both on stage and screen in "Death of a Salesman," along with appearances in such films as "The Nun's Story," "Baby Doll" and "Butterfield 8." Most coincidentally, the two distinguished Mildreds were featured in Alfred Hitchcock's 1955 movie "The Trouble With Harry." Shirley MacLaine's first picture. Now you'll have an opportunity to study their scenes together and sort out Natwick and Dunnock

Q. I can't wait to see "Racing With the Moon," the upcoming Sean Penn-Elizabeth McGovern movie, which I hear is set during the more innocent 1940s. Will there be lots of the wonderfully nostalgic music of this period, especially the recording of "Racing With the Moon" by my favorite bandleader, Vaughn Monroe? — R.K.

A. Hard to predict at this point. I've just seen a rough cut of this picture (directed by Richard Benjamin) in which Sean is seen as a newly enlisted U.S. Marine, and Elizabeth as his teenage sweetheart. The title song, along with some other vintage music, had been removed from the soundtrack. Interestingly, I do hear it may be reinstated in time for its release March 23, so I'll keep you posted.

the late Grace Kelly into a saint? If so, this is surely one of the most ridiculous things I've heard in my whole life. — C.U.

A. Yes, there is a big movement among Grace Kelly's fans to do just that. They proclaim she was more than an actress or a princess and that she performed miracles. Just recently a 10-year-old girl in France claimed a miraculous return of her eyesight (she was blinded after an accident), after dreaming that Grace

Pulp dispute is costing Industry U.S. contracts

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia's prolonged pulp dispute has lost some companies up to 50 per cent of their contracts with U.S. newsprint customers and is costing B.C. Hydro $500,000 a day in lost revenues, say industry spokesmen.

Talks in the dispute were to continue today after a weekend of meetings but negotiators refused to say whether the two pulp unions and the 14 companies that locked them out early last month are any closer to a settlement.

Don Saunders, president of Forest Industrial Relations, says some B.C. companies have lost up to 50 per cent of their contracts with U.S. newsprint customers and the losses could be permanent.

"Some of the companies have been told that they will only be asked to supply half of their 1984 volume. Newsprint is sold on long-term contracts and so it will be difficult to get that volume back," he said.

Traditional buyers of B.C. newsprint have been going to sources in eastern Canada and Europe, he said.

Hydro executive vice-president John Sheehan said the loss of $500,000 a day represents about 12 per cent of Hydro's revenues. The losses, he said, will not be made up and will likely lead to an increased debt load Hydro will carry into its 1984 fiscal year.

WILL COST MORE

Increased interest payments will ultimately be reflected in consumer bills, he added. "It's a fairly major portion of our revenue and it is not likely to be made up now."

Energy normally sold to pulp mills, sawmills and associated chemical plants is no longer being produced, Sheehan said. "Water is flowing through our dams unused. If you can't sell it, there is no point in producing it."

So far, the pulp lockout has taken more than $17 million in anticipated revenues, he said. "It wasn't half a million dollars a day we were losing at first but now it's at least that much."

Saunders said the industry has been warning for some time that lost contracts but it seems to fall on deaf ears.

It serves the companies right, said Art Gruntman, president of the Canadian Paperworkers Union, the largest of the two locked-out unions.

"That looks like more traps are a natural consequence of a lengthy pulp dispute."

"That's what happens when a customer depends on a supply which is essential to his business. 'We've been trying to get that point across for a long evidence that the lockout was an absolutely crazy decision."

WORKERS LOSE

Gruntman said he reckons his 7,000 members and about 5,500 members of the Pulp, Paper and Woodworkers of Canada have lost about $4,000 each since the lockout began. Both sides said the central issue remains length of contract.

The unions say they will adopt a three-year contract, which the companies want but it must include a cost-of-living adjustment. The companies will not accept this adjustment.

The industry wants the unions to accept a contract similar to one ratified by the 35,000-member International Woodworkers of America earlier this year.

The woodworkers' contract is a three-year pact with a wage freeze in the first year and increases of four per cent and 4.5 per cent in the succeeding two years. Base rate now is $13.96 an hour for both woodworkers and pulp workers.

About 10,000 woodworkers also have been off the job since pulp workers began secondary picketing at forest products companies that operate both pulp and lumber operations.

Lebanon's rival leaders conflict at conference

LAUSANNE, Switzerland (AP) — Sharp disputes over political power-sharing proposals were reported today as Lebanon's rival factional leaders entered the second week of their national reconciliation conference.

A formal session of the conference broke up after 15 minutes Sunday night, followed by a round of informal consultations involving President Amin Gemayel and chief delegates of rival Moslem and Christian factions.

A new plenary session was planned for today, but there were conflicting predictions about whether the talks would stall or produce at least the outlines of an agreement.

Syria's observer to the talks, Vice-President Abdul Halim Khaddam, who is said to be playing a key role in efforts to reshape the Lebanese government, was present at most of the informal consultations.

The conference was reported to be stalled by the reluctance of Christian leaders to yield to opposition demands for changes in the power-sharing formula under which public offices have been allocated on a religious basis since four decades ago.

Pro-government and opposition factions also are at odds over proposed reforms in the powers of the presidency, which Gemayel's opponents want to limit in the future, said conference sources who spoke on condition they not be identified. Some Moslem factions have been suggesting creation of a vice-presidential post.

The demands would cut the influence of Maronite Christians, who have dominated the government under an unwritten "national pact" since 1943, when Christians outnumbered Moslems in Lebanon. Since then, the growth of the Moslem population has outpaced that of Christians.

Khaddam spent hours with both sides Sunday, shuttling between rooms at the Beau Rivage Hotel, where the conference is being held.

Sources said Khaddam was pressing for a compromise plan that would contain at least a broad outline of institutional and electoral reforms as well as steps designed to consolidate a ceasefire agreement reached shortly after the conference began last Monday.

Beirut was reported quiet this morning except for sporadic gunfire. During the weekend however, the ceasefire was seriously strained by fighting between Christian and Moslem militiamen that killed at least 15 civilians and wounded 45.

Michel Samaha, Gemayel's political adviser, told reporters Sunday in Lausanne he expected the conference to wind up later today with a final text "much more positive" than that predicted by other sources.

In contrast, leftist Druse militia leader Walid Jumblatt told reporters he doubted any breakthrough would occur in discussions on a new power-sharing formula.

But he said the meeting might agree on some objectives to consolidate the ceasefire and hinted he would be willing to wait until later for political reforms.

He added, however, that if "we do not return with something substantial, we will be simply liquidated by our own men."

Security staff at the Manitoba legislature weren't taking any chances with a package that arrived for Premier Howard Pawley last week.

An electronic scan determined that the box bearing Newsweek magazine's return address contained something with wires attached.

Pawley's office said he hadn't ordered anything from the magazine so police bomb experts were called in and the legislature's west corridor was evacuated before the package was taken outside and destroyed.

What the security staff eventually found in the package was a portable telephone, sent to Pawley as a gift for renewing his subscription.

American pro-golfer Jan Stephenson, known not only for her swing, but also for her sexy calendars and posters, says she's been offered $50,000 to pose for Playboy magazine but there's "not enough money in the world" to make her strip for the camera.

Stephenson, 32, told Parade Magazine that although some of her magazine and calendar poses have been provocative, there is a limit to how far she will go to display her beauty. "I wouldn't want to do anything that my parents would be ashamed of," she said in the interview. "You know, I'd never do anything where I'd really, truly expose myself."

An Edmonton man is offering $5,000 to anyone willing to give him one kidney.

Ike Bryldt, 40, a businessman, said he is fed up with dialysis treatments and wants a transplant. He has been kept alive by a kidney machine since 1980.

"It's sort of a last-ditch effort," he said of his cash offer. If it fails, Bryldt said he is ready to die.

Doctors at Edmonton's University Hospital regard the sale of organs for transplant as unethical, said Bryldt, adding he will take the prospective donor to Europe for the operation.

Top-seeded Chris Evert Lloyd, who has never lost on a Florida clay-court surface in 80 professional matches, romped past third-seeded Gadusek 6-0, 6-1 in 47 minutes in final of the season's first world championship series.

Lloyd also defeated Carling Bassett of Toronto 6-3, 6-3 in a semifinal match Saturday.

When Randy Rosenau opened his mailbox the other day, he found a letter with a three-cent stamp that was discontinued in 1958 and the return address of a house that was torn down years ago.

The Portland, Ore., man said inside the envelope was a birthday card dated May 1, 1949.

A spokesman for the consumer affairs office in Portland said it was doubtful the letter was in the post office's possession for 35 years. More likely someone found the letter stashed away somewhere and stuck it in a mailbox.

Rosenau said he can't understand why the post office would even try to deliver a letter that was so old, "unless maybe they wanted the 17 cents (in postage due)."

Exhibition baseball

Oakland A's manager Steve Boros had barely finished calling for stolen bases, home runs and RBIs when Rickey Henderson did all three.

Henderson collected three hits Sunday, including a homer, drove in three runs and stole one base in the A's 7-2 exhibition victory over San Francisco Giants.

The speedster hit a 400-foot homer in the third inning, drove in two runs with a single in the fourth and singled during a two-run sixth.

Henderson, who stole 238 bases the last two seasons, is batting .400 in exhibition play with nine RBI and three homers in his last 16 at-bats.

Meanwhile, Mike Vail doubled home one run and Brad Mills added a two-run single in a sixth-inning rally that lifted Montreal Expos over Kansas City Royals 4-2.

DRIVE IN FIVE
George Bell drove in five runs with a homer, triple and single to lead Toronto Blue Jays to a 6-3 victory over New York Mets in an 11-inning game.

Atlanta Braves, who blew a 6½-game lead during the last seven weeks of the 1983 season and finished three games behind Los Angeles in the National League West, completed a three-game sweep of the Dodgers.

Bob Watson's grand-slam homer in the fifth inning off rookie Rich Rodas broke a tie and gave the Braves a 5-1 victory.

Houston's Nolan Ryan hurled no-hit ball for seven innings against Detroit, facing the minimum 21 batters, striking out four and allowing only one base runner — on an error by shortstop Dickie Thon. The Tigers pushed across two runs in the eighth off Joe Sambito and nipped the Astros 2-1 in a battle of two-hitters.

World Series hero Mike Boddicker pitched six scoreless innings as Baltimore Orioles defeated Cincinnati Reds 2-0. Boddicker allowed three hits and retired the last 15 batters he faced.

Al Cowens drove in five runs and Bill Nahorodny had four RBI as Seattle Mariners outslugged Cleveland Indians 15-13. Cowens hit a three-run homer, a two-run triple and a double. Nahorodny had a two-run homer, two singles and a sacrifice fly.

PROVIDES THE EDGE
Mickey Hatcher homered and set up another run with a single as Minnesota Twins edged Boston Red Sox 4-3.

Ruppert Jones, Doug Frobel, a Nepean, Ont., native, and Hedi Vargas had two hits each as Pittsburgh Pirates defeated St. Louis Cardinals 6-4.

Third baseman Toby Harrah's two-out, two-base error in the seventh inning on Dave Hostetter's grounder allowed runners to score from first and third and helped Texas Rangers to a 5-3 victory over New York Yankees.

Len Matusek collected four hits, including three doubles, and drove in four runs as Philadelphia Phillies beat Chicago White Sox 8-1.
